Foreward

Agriculture is the mainstay of livelihood for about 60% of Indian rural households. The aggregation of farmers is the need of an hour, as they are cultivating in small patches of land which is not economical to purchase inputs and market their produce. However, the green revolution has improved the production and productivity of major staple food crops of India, this has enabled the country to overcome widespread hunger and starvation, further was successful in achieving self-sufficiency in food. Despite of this, it is still observed that, malnutrition, undernutrition and obese among the people, which is due to the deficiency of nutrients, vitamins and other essential components in the food system. Hence, the demand for nutri-cereals or millets is raising in the market for their nutritional value and capacity to combat the lifestyle ailments. In this background, ICAR-IIMR, Hyderabad is involved in formation and handholding of 31 Millets FPOs across four states of India. As a CBBO, IIMR is organizing capacity building programs for BoDs and CEOs of newly formed FPOs further helping them in infusing the same skills to its shareholders. It is also supporting FPOs to connect to line departments of the state to avail the facilities and the support. FPOs are also connecting to millets startups, State Agricultural University (SAUs) and its KVKs for technical support and they are also involved in organizing need-based training programs, demonstrations, field days etc. To transform the farmers and their organization into business entity, IIMR has trained FPOs to undertake processing and value addition of millets and connecting to markets to sell their raw as well as value added products. An effort was also made by IIMR to connect FPOs to e-marketing channels to sell their products directly to the intended consumers. Formation of FPOs can harness better profit by the small and marginal farmers by way of its collective approach. I congratulate FPO project team for bringing out this document to showcase the profile of 31 FPOs formed by IIMR for ease of doing business with various stakeholders.

Preface

Farmer Producer Organizations (FPOs) are the farmers' collectives, formed by Farmers to support themselves. With the aim to aggregate the farmers and harness the effectiveness of the work and strengthen their bargaining power also support them to become agricultural entrepreneurs, the Government of India aims to form and promote 10,000 new FPOs across the country, which accounts to the worth of Rs. 6865 crores. At present, there are about 7000 FPOs in the country, which are implemented by various Implementing Agencies (IA). The shareholders' number ranges from 300 to 1000 farmers. These shareholders require technical handholding as well as adequate capital and infrastructure facilities, market linkages and proper guidance to sustain their business operations. Majority (60.00 %) of Indian farmers depend on rain-fed farming and Millets cultivation suits to their agro-climatic situations. Millets are the rich sources of proteins, dietary fiber, carbohydrates and other minerals. Hence, they act both as food and fodder in providing nutritional security. Regardless of their benefits, millets are forgotten in the system of agricultural production and their consumption in daily life. In recent years, efforts were made towards reviving millets. Previously as a Resource Institute of Small Farmers Agri Business Consortium (SFAC), ICAR-IIMR has implemented six FPOs in Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and Madhya Pradesh states under Nutri- cereals submission of NFSM. Further, in the new Central Sector Scheme, ICAR-IIMR as a Cluster Based Business Organization (CBBO) is promoting and incubating of 25 millets based FPOs across Karnataka (19), Andhra Pradesh (02) and Telangana (04) states of India. In total, IIMR has formed and handholding 31 FPOs and supporting by providing millets seeds, technologies of processing and value addition, assisting in getting Management Cost, equity grants. Besides this, IIMR is building capacities of CEOs and BoDs other millet based FPOs from Odisha, Karnataka, Maharashtra, Telangana and other states to make viable and sustainable FPOs. Thus, millets FPOs are working towards promotion of millets cultivation, processing and value addition thereby, consumption of millets among the people is also increasing due to its nutritional and nutraceutical properties in managing the lifestyle diseases like diabetes, blood pressure etc. Millets have got potential for doubling farmers income. Authors acknowledge the financial support of SFAC, WDD, NABARD and NCDC in formation of FPOs.
